Issue 1/2024 of the journal Studia Universitatis Babeș-Bolyai, series Philologia will be focused on interdisciplinary approaches to emerging terminologies and the problems of specialised translation in these thematic and textual contexts.

Many recent works have focused on the dynamics of terminological neology, from the work of Humbley (2018) to studies led by Balnat and Gérard (2021, 17-23), Cabré Castellví (2021, 25-41), Zanola (2021, 171-188) and to recent terminographic works in emerging fields (Diccionario de Covid-19 - Tremedica, Diccionari de la COVID-19 - TERMCAT, COVID-19 multilingual terminology in IATE, Glosar multilingv de termeni din domeniul Covid-19) as well as in interdisciplinary research (Guerero Ramos 2020).

This issue aims to deepen the analysis of and expand debates in the new fields of terminological investigation of lesser-researched specialised domains of the contemporary world, as well as in already existing specialised domains which are enriched by emergent concepts, based on their corresponding neological needs. These new terminologies raise problems regarding translation management, being particularly relevant aspects to be analysed in order to prepare the ground for future research and development in the field.

We advise that the research for the current issue be based on theoretical approaches as well as on case studies aiming at the description, analysis, and in-depth understanding of the study of emerging terminologies, terminological neology, and specialised translation. Contributions offering reflections on the following topics will be the focus of the issue:

- Terminological neology and specialised translation;
- The treatment of emerging terminologies;
- Specialised neology and diachrony;
- Terminological neology, technolects and professional/juvenile jargon;
- Current issues in terminological studies and the building of glossaries;
- Contrastive studies of emerging terminologies;
- Specialised neology and Romance languages;
- Emerging terminologies and translation;
- Methods and tools for the automatic processing of terminological neology;
- Computer-assisted translation tools and the management of emerging terminologies;
- Machine translation and terminological neology;
- Emerging terminologies and social networks.

Articles may be submitted in one of the following languages: French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese and English.
